

Andrew Percival

Whole Class Marking

Whole-class marking can be an effective way to ensure students overcome misconceptions and improve their learning. While the approach can offer benefits to learning it is worth noting that implemented incorrectly it can lead to other learning challenges for the class.

In this session Andrew will introduce the concept of whole class marking and how it can be successfully implemented in school and lead to a positive impact on students progress.

Andrew Percival is deputy headteacher at Stanley Road Primary School in Oldham. Early in his career he became an Advanced Skills Teacher working across Key Stages 1 and 2. He has been teaching and leading in schools for over 20 years and currently leads on curriculum development and English. He has delivered training on curriculum development across the UK to over 200 schools and has written articles for TES, Teach Primary and The ResearchEd Guide to Curriculum. He can be found on Twitter at @primarypercival

Booking Information

When is the event

9 November

3.45pm-4.45pm

Who should attend

Primary and Secondary
Headteachers, Deputy Headteachers

Venue

Online training

Cost

£25 per school

Book online now

or contact Liz Hopkins, e.hopkins@becketonline.co.uk