Crawley

Crawley is located in the county of West Sussex, approximately 33 miles south of London and 20 miles north of Brighton with easy access to the M23 motorway.

The town has a population of around 80,000.

It was designated as a New Town in 1947 and developed to accommodate some of the population overspill from London, although it has retained many old buildings, some medieval, at its original centre. It is a busy industrial, commercial and retail centre, and its proximity to London makes it an attractive residential base for commuters working in the capital.

It houses a large number of aerospace companies and is located in the vicinity of Gatwick airport.

Emergency numbers

Emergencies 999

999 is the emergency number in the UK for Ambulance, Fire and Police services.

If it's not a life-threatening emergency and you or the person you're with does not need immediate medical attention, please consider other options before dialling 999.

For example:

- self care at home
- calling the NHS helpline on 111
- talking to a pharmacist
- visiting or calling your GP
- going to your local NHS walk-in centre
- going to your local urgent care centre or your local minor injuries unit
